

Danish house prices extreme regional variation

The inflation in property prices is not an isolated phenomenon.

The inflation in property prices is not an isolated phenomenon - a new survey done for Danish business daily Borsen shows that house owners in the exclusive Gentofte council north of Copenhagen could buy an entire county in one of several less sought-after regions - even if each of these have four times the population of Gentofte.